Description	So, you want to be a diversity trainer! Or you are one of the people in charge of diversity education and training in your organization! Congratulations! Have you ever wondered why many people resist “Diversity Training” or whether you could provide training to the expectation of your clients or your supervisors? If you have any doubt, I want to tell you, “YES, YOU CAN!” But remember, diversity training is not about statistics, or how many books and resources you have, or how many DVDs and PowerPoint you use. Diversity Education is a learning process using thought-provoking activities that guide participants to reach deep in their inner self to determine who they are as cultural entities, how to appreciate cultural differences, and how to build cultural bridges. This Training of Trainers (TOT) involves numerous learning activities, and requires practice and short presentations to a group of professionals who help you improve your presentation skills.

What People Say About This Workshop	“I was the only minority in our Diversity council and was elected chair of the committee, but I was not prepared for the task. Dr. Ngomsi’s seminar opened my eyes not only in understanding Diversity and Inclusion (yes, and INCLUSION!) myself, but also to infuse it in my organization with little resistance.” R. T (Federal Agency employee) “My company was looking for a person who would also be in charge of the cultural diversity. During the interview, I shared with the committee what I had just learned from Dr. Ngomsi’s 3-day seminar, and was hired.”
Just a reminder!	Tolerance is the greatest gift of the mind; it requires the same effort of the brain that it takes to balance oneself on a bicycle. Helen Keller
