

CORPORATE TRAINER
SPEAKER AND AWARD WINNING EDUCATOR

EMMANUEL NGOMSI, PH.D.

Dr. Emmanuel Ngomsi is President of All World Languages and Cultures, Inc. a training and consulting corporation specialized in diversity education and training, intercultural communication, international relocation and language services.

Dr. Ngomsi specializes in educating organizations about world cultures, and in promoting a love of cultures, respect for diversity, and international experience. His clients include corporations like Shell Corporation, Boeing, Bronson Healthcare Group, Pfizer Pharmaceuticals, Wells Fargo Bank, American Express; US Federal Government agencies like the GSA, the Social Security Administration, the US Department of Homeland Security, State Government agencies, the VA hospitals, the Federal Aviation Administration, and numerous colleges, universities and school systems.

Emmanuel is an experienced educator who has taught French, Biology and Chemistry to Cameroonians, French, and American students, and served as Administrator of the International Studies with a School District. As Professor, he designed and taught courses on African cultures and education, as well as culture and diversity in the workplace. For two years he was senior culture and language coordinator for the College Semester Abroad (CSA) at the School for International Living in Brattleboro, Vermont.

Dr. Ngomsi's career in cultures and languages started with the U.S. Peace Corps where he spent nine years as cross-cultural instructor and Chief-language Coordinator in Africa. He has also served as presenter at the Foreign Service Institute (FSI) of the State Department in Washington DC.

Dr. Ngomsi was honored in 1995 when he received the National Foreign Language Fellowship Award, from the National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH) and the Geraldine R. Dodge Foundation. This distinction allowed him to pursue his dream of researching African folkloric and games. He is the creator of YAN-KOLOBA: A Teambuilding Game Rooted in the Cultures of Africa. He is author of Cultural Detective West-Africa and Cultural Detective-Cameroon. His recently released book is titled, SHOCKING CULTURES: Hilarious and Disastrous Challenges of Foreign Workers in the USA, January 2009.

Emmanuel earned his Bachelor's degree in Biology, and a master's degree in biological sciences at the University Of Yaounde, Cameroon; an Educational Specialist Degree in Urban Leadership and Policy Studies in Education, and a Multidisciplinary Ph.D. in Public Affairs and Administration and Educational Leadership at the University of Missouri-Kansas City.

Since 2004, Dr. Ngomsi serves as faculty member at the Summer Institute for Intercultural Communication (SIIC) at Pacific University in Portland, Oregon, where he teaches courses on valuing, managing and leveraging diversity in the workplace to Diversity Managers of various major organizations including numerous Fortune 500 companies. He is active in numerous cultural, foreign languages, educational and professional training associations, and has been a guest-speaker, lecturer, and presenter at various national and international conferences.